New Frontiers in Pelvic Health

Innovation, Inclusion, and Interdisciplinarity in Pelvic Floor Care

We are delighted to announce the 5th Bi-Annual IUGA International Symposia which will be held virtually on February 28- March 1, 2026; New Frontiers in Pelvic Health; Innovation, Inclusion, and Interdisciplinarity in Pelvic Floor Care. This meeting began as an in-person event in 2019 and was subsequently held it online in 2020 due to the Covid pandemic. It was then that we realized that we could accommodate many more attendees for a lower registration fee, while offering a dynamic and engaging program virtually. In 2021, 2022, and 2024, the virtual format continued to be a success with each meeting having more attendees than the last. The most recent two International Symposia each had nearly 400 attendees, and we are aiming to meet or exceed this number in 2026.

Building on the success of the last four meetings and ensuring we incorporate the feedback we have received, our Program Committee, co-chaired by Angela Rantell (UK) and Cristiane Carboni (Brazil), has created a program filled with international experts presenting multidisciplinary perspectives. The fantastic two-day program is filled with up-to-date, evidence-based information about pelvic floor dysfunction, birth trauma, nursing and physiotherapy management, and the role of the multidisciplinary team in treating women suffering from pelvic floor disorders. The virtual format allows for engaging plenary sessions, lectures, and round table discussions, workshops and, live panel discussions. Registration information, goals, and the program will be available shortly at <https://www.iuga.org/events/international-symposia/international-symposium-2026>.

IUGA is committed to advance education and research, to provide guidance, and to increase awareness related to pelvic floor dysfunction. This symposium is designed for and by physiotherapists, midwives, nurses, and other allied health professionals who play a crucial role in the treatment of pelvic floor disorders, but all members of the multidisciplinary team are welcome. Working together is the only way we will achieve pelvic floor health for all women.

The aims of this symposium are for participants to:

- Understand the impact of hormonal changes on pelvic floor function across the female lifespan.
- Recognize evidence-based strategies for pelvic floor rehabilitation in athletes, postpartum, and menopausal women.
- Identify multidisciplinary approaches to managing pelvic pain and sexual dysfunction.
- Promote inclusive pelvic health care for diverse populations and low-resource settings.
